Poetry.

Hello everyone, it's Ms Rashid. Today we're going to write some poetry. Do you know what an ogre is? A big, hairy, scary monster of a man

What would you need if you were going to make an ogre?

Or a unicorn?

Or a dragon?

An Ogre poem is on the next page. Use the same structure to write a poem of your own.

TO MAKE AN OGRE

If I was asked to make an ogre I would take-

For the skin-

The leathery hide of a rhinoceros,

The rough scrape of granite,

And the bristles from a witch's broom

For bones-

The bark of an gnarled oak tree

And the tough shell of a diamond

For the muscles-

The strength of a dragon's jaw,

And the force as a tsunami strikes

For the eyes-

The power of Medusa's stare,

And the vision of Cyclops

For the heart-

The beat of Big Ben's pulse,

And the cruelty of a thousand wars.

TO MAKE A UNICORN

If I was asked to make a Unicorn I would take-

For the mane-

For the horn-

For the legs-

For the eyes-

For the heart-

TO MAKE A DRAGON

If I was asked to make a dragon I would take-

For the scales-

For the wings-

For the fiery breath-

For the teeth-

For the heart-
