L.K: To turn our life cycles into storyboards

If you want to get feedback/show off your work, send it to WDV.Year4@oasiswoodview.org

A storyboard shows the different stages of a conversation or cycle and are usually in chronological (time) order. Yesterday, you created your very own life cycle of your own choosing. Whatever you chose, you are going to turn it into a storyboard today. A storyboard MUST have:

1. Individual boxes
2. A space for a drawing and a space for writing
3. Colour and imagination!

Everyone has created storyboards this year and you are all well-practised. I have provided a template for you to use and you can add/take away boxes depending on how many you need. Make sure it is colourful and that you add a descriptive sentence underneath to show what is going on in your story box. Good luck! I really want to see examples of today's work, so please send them to me at WDV.Year4@oasiswoodview.org. If they are really good, they may make it onto the school Twitter!
